He worked as a foreman in the gardens at Chatsworth, probably in the arboretum department. In 1838 when Paxton went on an extended journey abroad with the 6th Duke, and then Andrew Stewart left for Paris, he was temporarily put in charge of the gardens. A little is known about Bailey from the letters written between Joseph and Sarah Paxton, who did not approve of his conduct. Bailey appears to suffered for several years from alcoholism. In 1839, Sarah wrote that she suspected Bailey was seeing one of the local girls, Hannah Milner, 'in the character of a lover'. Sarah's suspicions were correct. In 1841 Thomas Bailey married Hannah Milner at Edensor, and the Paxtons were witnesses. Unfortunately, the marriage does not appear to have put an end to Bailey's drinking, which was worsened on the death of his mother. Thomas Bailey died, possibly as a result of complications from his

Bickell	Elizabeth	Female	1844	1846	Chatsworth	Housekeeping	Housekeeper	Housekeeper	C/16: Accounts of Michal Hall and Thomas Fletcher 1794, 1796-17975: Household Accounts (1843-46), DF4/1/8/1: Documents relating to the case of Miss Bickell 1867;, CS2/128/0-4, DF5/2/2/2	Elizabeth Bickell was employed as temporary housekeeper for the visit of Queen Victoria following the death of Hannah Gregory in 1843. After this satisfactory trial period, she was employed as the new housekeeper in April 1844. Later that year she managed an outbreak of typhus among the housemaids (P/247) and was praised for her ability to generate money from tourists (P/248). However, tensions rose between Bickell and Sarah Paxton, and in 1846 Bickell was dismissed after Sarah Paxton told her husband and the Duke that the housekeeper had taken friends and servants to Hardwick, had flowers cut from the conservatory for a wedding, and entertained her friends in the Duke's private apartments at Chatsworth. Miss Bickell wrote two apologetic letters to the Duke, and from around 1848 until 1865 she was paid a pension of £100 per year. She be the housekeeper of the Queen's Hotel, Manchester in the 1861 census, as she had friends in Manchester.

Some of his time was spent as physician to the Duke and his household servants, and the rest of his time taking care of his patients at his practice at Baslow. This dual allegiance caused problems, because the Duke was fond of travelling, and frequently took Condell away from his practice (see CS2/10/3-6). Condell was present when the Duke died at Hardwick Hall in 1858.

Gasper	Sidney	Male	1895	1905	Chatsworth	Park	Keeper	Gamekeeper	L/94/182: S. Gasper. Appointment as Gamekeeper. Correspondence etc., 1895	Sidney Gasper was a gamekeeper dismissed for his alcoholism and inefficiency, and for selling tickets to the public to watch the shooting. He was injured by a cart during his notice period, and many of the letters discuss whether or not the Duke is liable to pay compensation. The affair was slightly awkward for the Duke, as Gasper had come recommended by Lord Stanley.

In 1832 he was apprenticed to Joseph Paxton at Chatsworth, and three years later, when he was only twenty years old, the Duke sent him on a plant-finding expedition to India. He returned in 1837 with Amherstia Nobilis plants, and 300 other new plant species, including 80 orchids. On his triumphant return, Gibson was promoted to foreman of the exotic plant department. He seems to have got on well with Joseph Paxton, even if Sarah Paxton thought he was a 'precious puppy'. John Gibson left Chatsworth in 1849, and went on to become superintendent of Hyde Park, St James' Park and Kensington Gardens. He died in 1875 after a period of illness which left him paralysed. The archive contains a collection of correspondence written between John Gibson and Paxton during his expedition to India. It also contains a letter to the Duke from the time of his departure from Chatsworth, thanking him for everything.
