In 1846, when Elizabeth Bickell was dismissed for entertaining friends in the Duke's private rooms, Mary Hastie (then working at Devonshire House) was brought in to replace Bickell as housekeeper. Mary asked the Duke if Phoebe could join her as assistant housekeeper for £20 a year. The Duke allowed Phoebe to move back to Chatsworth but refused to pay her a housekeeper's salary- therefore, the two women shared a housekeeper's salary until the Duke's death in 1858, when they moved together to Denbigh Street in Pimlico. Dined in Steward's Room during Duke's visit, 1852 and called 'Mrs Radley'.

He was principally based at Devonshire House, but travelled with the Duke where needed, including to Russia for the coronation of Nicolas I. In Social Gleanings by Mark Boyd, 1875, Boyd claims that Ridgway was the Duke's 'foster brother', 'his mother, Mrs. Ridgway, having suckled the future Lord of Chatsworth'. Boyd also writes that it was Ridgway who introduced the Duke to Paxton, while the latter was a labourer in the Chiswick gardens.

Santi	Paul	Male	1825	1838	Traveling	Multiple	Attendant	Courier	C/16: Accounts of Michal Hall and Thomas Fletcher 1794, 1796-17975: Household Accounts for Devonshire, Chiswick, Chatsworth and Brighton, 1824-46, 51; Devonshire House Servants, 1825; P/9; CS2/3967/1-5; CS6/3025	The Duke described Santi as 'a very handsome and picturesque person, with clever wicked eyes'. He travelled abroad with both the 6th Duke and with Louisa Cavendish. Santi had a weakness for gambling, and in 1836 he wrote to the Duke admitting to having stolen some of the housekeeping money to feed his habit. He told the Duke he intended to commit suicide, and that it was the fault of Meynell (the valet) and Ridgway (the steward). The Duke paid off Santi's gambling debts but was forced to dismiss him two years later, in 1838, probably again for gambling. Despite his dismissal, Paul Santi and his daughter Louise were paid generous pensions for many years after his employment.

He describes Travis as 'prolix, old school, and very consequential, in a cocked hat and striped stockings, and gold shoe-buckles, wearing powder and a long pigtail'. TRavis was known for telling a story about when the King of Denmark came to see Chatsworth. Ralph Travis was one of the servants paid to have a hair powder certificate. He was also provided with a horse 'to ride on all proper occasions'. Travis also appears in the Steward's Order Book and was the reason why the book was started in the first place. Ralph Travis had employed his own men to prune the trees in the park 'injuring the appearance and growth of them'. While Travis claimed he was only doing what he had been ordered to do, the Steward feared a rebuke from the Duke and made Travis sign a witness statement to say that he had been in charge of the order not the steward. This incident made the steward start this book, in order that all actions would be

In March 1838, Robert Wallace and Peter Banks sailed for New York. They were to be paid £1 4s per week, scheduled to return in three years, and warned to 'beware of bears and women'. On the 20th July, Wallace wrote a letter to Paxton from the Manitoba province in Canada. He wrote that they had travelled on treacherous rivers in three large canoes and requested a long list of items to be sent to him. The objects Wallace requested were promptly sent to Canada, but unfortunately he would never receive them. On the 7th November, Robert Wallace and Peter Banks died when their canoe capsized in the rapids of the Columbia River. A letter informing Paxton and the Duke of the disaster was sent to Chatsworth, but did not arrive until six months later. It said that, 'in all eleven persons who travelled from their distant homes

Wilson	William	Male	c.1840	1851	Chatsworth	Garden	Gardener	Jr Gardener	DF33/5: correspondence of Ann Wilson of Edensor 1840s; DE/CH/6/1/23 List of workers and foremen; 1841 Census for Edensor	William Wilson was born in Beeley in 1816. He is therefore in the minority of nineteenth-century gardeners at Chatsworth who were born on the estate. Following the remodelling of Edensor he moved there with his mother, Elizabeth, and wife, Ann. He probably began working in the gardens in the 1830s, where he became friends with John Milner. Unfortunately, William suffered from ill health. In the 1840s he was sent away twice to Southport, by Joseph Paxton, to bathe in the sea and recover from his health problems. Paxton paid for his expenses for these trips. In 1845 he was elected a councilman of the Edensor Club, which organised feasts and other activities for the local men. Sadly, William died in 1851, aged only 35. When William died he left his wife Ann to look after their four children: Julia, Edmund, Elizabeth and Alfred.
Wilson	Edmund	Male	1868		Hardwick	Garden	Gardener	Gardener	DF33/5	Edmund Wilson was the son of William Wilson. There is one letter written by him in DF33/5, but he is mentioned frequently by his mother Ann. In the 1870s Edmund moved to be head gardener at Hardwick Hall, where he remained for at least 50 years.

Peter appears in the account books until 1842 as 'Peter the Russian' or simply 'the Russian Coachman'. He was mentioned in several newspaper articles on account of his great bushy beard (very unusual at the time) and drew attention to himself with his tendency to wear traditional Russian clothing. He is also mentioned in the diary of Queen Victoria. There are several paintings and drawings of him, and he featured as a subject in Sir Edwin Landseer's painting "Bolton Abbey in the Olden Time", which is at Chatsworth. In 1833 his wife wrote to the Duke that Ridgway had forbidden Peter from getting beer from the cellar. Peter was eventually let go in 1841, for unknown reasons. He wrote to the Duke asking for his help in finding more work, and to find work for his disabled son. Ridgway wrote in a letter to
